

Coffee Peeling Hammam

Imagine the scene: it's been a long week, you're sick of travelling between home and sofa, and last night was a big one. Instead of indulging in junk TV and food, drag your sorry self to the spa, where a coffee Hammam won't just perk you up, it will leave you skipping back to reality. Taking place at the magnificent Talise Ottoman Spa, the treatment begins with exfoliation on the warmed marble slab, then a full-body foam massage as you gaze up at the painted ceiling and a hair wash and cleanse, before a mask of Turkish coffee is applied to exfoliate further. Make sure you arrive in time to use the vast wet facilities – including a snow bath and therapy pools – and enjoy the faint coffee whiff on your skin.

Budget vs blowout

Two cleansers at two very different prices

HUMAN + KIND ALL-IN-ONE FACIAL CLEANSER

Irish brand Human + Kind has thrown their hat into the hot cloth ring with a wash-off formula that comes with a soft cloth, and is packed with nutrients including aloe vera, cocoa butter for moisture and centella asiatica extract for boosting circulation. It smells great, is gentle and budges even mascara. Cute packaging, too. 🏠 Available at Boots, Milk & Honey, The Change Initiative, Down To Earth and namshi.com. ## SQOOM

With a futuristic name and the technology to match, this German-designed gadget promises to beat the ageing process with ultrasound vibrations and ionisation to deliver cleansing and moisturising gels deep into the dermis. It's a spa-standard, at home product, and if you're serious about skincare (and have deep products), this could well be a good investment.
